Butterbur

Jodie Hatcher

Woven copper sculpture

Butterbur was created from exploring different ways of forming and also reflect on past work. The form is inspired by the fauna found alongside the River Lathkill in Derbyshire. Copper being her material of choice, due to its versatility and the amazing colours that can be produced. Jodie weaves her pattern piece and then repeatedly anneals and hammers to create her desired forms. Jodie's intent is for her work to both intrigue and to be questioned by the viewer. She hopes you become captivated by these objects and see something new from every angle.
