Non-Conforming Bodies

Liliana Zaharia

Screen and speakers

Non-Conforming Bodies examines representations of chronic pain through visual imagery, informed by the artist's own experience. It is comprised of photographs, videos and sound design. The work investigates the collective experience and how biological, psychological and societal elements intersect and influence our understanding of pain. The participants reinterpret long term physical pain through improvised performances based on somatic movements. Body movements and postures work as a way to explore, re-imagine and visualise physical and mental manifestations that are often invisible. Through a performative practice, the series aims to re-think the concept of chronic pain and open up channels for empathy.

Sound design: Razvan Hoge

Participants: Konstantina Katsikari, Ken Nakajima, Xinyi He
